MANN: Trail Begins in Sniper Attack

ship with Patty he refused to answer the questions.

"Do I understand you plan to take the Fifth Amendment on (questions of) rape, incest, and violence?" asked Hansen.

"Yes, based on my attorney's advice," replied Mann.

Mann confirmed he had $1 million in insurance and that Patty would inherit a share of his estate. He also agreed he and his daughter had shared the same cabin on a trip to Bermuda won by the senior Mann. Mann also admitted he bought expensive gifts for her.

"Is that a crime?" he responded. "I'm sorry, sir, but I love my daughter."

"You'll admit, won't you," questioned Hansen, "that you exercised power over her for sexual favors."

"I refuse to answer that question," replied Mann.

Both attorneys questioned Mann about the happenings during a surprise visit Mann made to his daughter at Snow College where she and Midgley were both students. On the visit Mann found Patty and Roger and their respective roommates in the same bedroom late at night.

"I became angry like most fathers would," Mann told Eyre.

Hansen asked if it was true Mann had hit Patty so hard on the side of the head he had bent the post to her earring, broke the skin on her face, and bruised her head.

"I hit her, sir. I don't know how hard. I was mad," said Mann.

But when Mann was questioned about his reputation for having a hot temper he refused to answer. He did confirm that his daughter had a reputation for being kind, gentle, and non-violent.

Mann agreed he didn't want his daughter punished and had offered to pay her bail but she had refused. Patty Mann has been in Juab County Jail in lieu of $20,000 bond since the shooting.

"I don't think she is guilty," Mann told the court.

Hansen told the court, as part of his opening statement, that Patty was asked why she put up with the relationship between her father and herself and had answered that no one could understand unless they had been through it.

"She loved him as a father but couldn't stand him. She wanted to get away from him," Hansen told the jurors. Patty Mann was scheduled to take the stand in her own defense later today.

The prosecution questioned law enforcement officials about the details of the evidence linking Patty to the scene and establishing that three and possibly four shots hit the Mann car as it drove through Salt Creek Canyon May 27.

Earlier a request by Hansen for a change of venue was denied by Judge J. Robert Bullock. Bullock said he found no reason to believe that those chosen for the jury would not be able to act impartially.

EXTRADITE: Laffertys Appear Before Judge

A press release Tuesday prepared by American Fork police officials and the FBI stated that fugitive charges would be dismissed upon extradition of the suspects to Utah.

The Laffertys are accused of killing Brenda Wright Lafferty, 24, and her 15-month-old daughter Erica, by cutting their throats. Police and relatives believe Brenda Lafferty's name was on a "hit list" for her support of the gamist teachings.

"We know she (Brenda) would have resisted that. Several of the boys' wives divorced them because they didn't go along with it. It's possible they blamed her for it," said James Wright, Brenda's father.

The list, found in a Utah County home that Johnson refuses to pinpoint, also included Highland resident Chloe Lowe who supported Diane's divorce, and Richard Stowe, an LDS stake president reveal the list was in Ron Lafferty's handwriting. It apparently was considered by the Laffertys to be a "revelation" from God.

Johnson said his office notified the Lowe and Stowe families about the "potential revelation" within two days after the murders.

The Spanish Fork-South LDS stake president at the time of Dan Lafferty's excommunication, Kent Hansen, said today he and seven other individuals and nine fertys. Hansen received a call from the sheriff's office at 2:30 a.m. July 25, he said.

"My feelings were it was an assembled list of people — other than the four on the revelation — who might have done something to offend them (the Laffertys)," Hansen said.

Also warned were several of Lafferty's sisters; other divorced wives, including Dan Lafferty's first wife who remains in hiding;
